Brazil Ranks 78 out of 143 in the WJP Rule of Law Index

- 2025 WJP Rule of Law Index® finds the rule of law recession accelerates as authoritarian trends expand
- Decline in judicial independence and shrinking civic space signal heightened risk to democracy worldwide
- Brazil's score increased, ranks 17 out of 32 regionally

WASHINGTON (October 28, 2025) – The global rule of law recession has accelerated again, according to the new *WJP Rule of Law Index*® 2025. A stark 68% of countries declined in their rule of law in 2025, compared to 57% in the previous year.

However, Brazil is among the minority of countries to see its rule of law score increase this year.

Brazil's overall rule of law score increased 1.1% in this year's Index. It ranks 78th out of 143 countries worldwide.

Regionally, Brazil ranks 17th out of 32 countries in Latin America and the Caribbean.* The region's top performer is Uruguay (ranked 23rd out of 143 globally), followed by Costa Rica and Barbados. The three countries with the lowest scores in the region are Nicaragua, Haiti, and Venezuela (143rd globally).

In the last year, 24 out of 32 countries declined in Latin America and the Caribbean. Of those 24 countries, 19 had also declined in the previous year.

Among upper-middle income countries, Brazil ranks 22nd out of 41.**

Brazil and global trends

An expansion of authoritarian trends is the primary force behind the rule of law recession, with deep declines in factors measuring Constraints on Government Powers, Open Government, and Fundamental Rights.

The integrity of checks and balances has also been seriously weakened, but not in Brazil.

A characteristic of this accelerated rule of law recession is a shrinking civic space. Freedoms crucial for public discourse and government oversight—measured under the Open Government and Fundamental Rights factors—saw widespread erosion. Brazil is among the over 70% of countries experiencing a shrinking of civic freedoms:

- “Freedom of opinion and expression” declined in 73% of countries, including Brazil.
- “Freedom of assembly and association” declined in 72% of countries, including Brazil.
- “Civic participation” declined in 71% of countries, including Brazil.

The Index shows that judiciaries are losing ground to executive overreach, with rising political interference across justice systems. Indicators measuring whether the judiciary limits executive power and whether civil and criminal justice are free from improper government influence declined in 61%, 67%, and 62% of countries, respectively. This includes Brazil.

More broadly, civil justice weakened in 68% of countries, but not in Brazil. This decline reflects longer delays, less effective alternatives to court (such as mediation), and greater government interference.

Globally, the top-ranked country in the 2025 WJP Rule of Law Index is Denmark, followed by Norway, Finland, Sweden, and New Zealand. The country with the lowest score is Venezuela, followed by Afghanistan, Cambodia, Haiti, and Nicaragua.
