Costa Rica Ranks 28 out of 143 in the WJP Rule of Law Index

- 2025 WJP Rule of Law Index® finds the rule of law recession accelerates as authoritarian trends expand
- Decline in judicial independence and shrinking civic space signal heightened risk to democracy worldwide
- Costa Rica's score decreased, ranks 2 out of 32 regionally

WASHINGTON (October 28, 2025) – The global rule of law recession has accelerated again, according to the new **WJP Rule of Law Index® 2025**. A stark 68% of countries declined in their rule of law in 2025, compared to 57% in the previous year—including Costa Rica.

Costa Rica's overall rule of law score decreased by less than 1% in this year's Index. It ranks 28th out of 143 countries worldwide.

Regionally, Costa Rica ranks 2nd out of 32 countries in Latin America and the Caribbean.* The region's top performer is Uruguay (ranked 23rd out of 143 globally), followed by Costa Rica and Barbados. The three countries with the lowest scores in the region are Nicaragua, Haiti, and Venezuela (143rd globally).

In the last year, 24 out of 32 countries declined in Latin America and the Caribbean. Of those 24 countries, 19 had also declined in the previous year.

Among high income countries, Costa Rica ranks 28th out of 51.**

Costa Rica and global trends

An expansion of authoritarian trends is the primary force behind the rule of law recession, with deep declines in factors measuring Constraints on Government Powers, Open Government, and Fundamental Rights.

The integrity of checks and balances has also been seriously weakened, including in Costa Rica.

A characteristic of this accelerated rule of law recession is a shrinking civic space. Freedoms crucial for public discourse and government oversight—measured under the Open Government and Fundamental Rights factors—saw widespread erosion. Costa Rica is among the over 70% of countries experiencing a shrinking of civic freedoms:

- “Freedom of opinion and expression” declined in 73% of countries, including Costa Rica.
- “Freedom of assembly and association” declined in 72% of countries, including Costa Rica.
- “Civic participation” declined in 71% of countries, including Costa Rica.

The Index shows that judiciaries are losing ground to executive overreach, with rising political interference across justice systems. Indicators measuring whether the judiciary limits executive power and whether civil and criminal justice are free from improper government influence declined in 61%, 67%, and 62% of countries, respectively. This includes Costa Rica.

More broadly, civil justice weakened in 68% of countries, but not in Costa Rica. This decline reflects longer delays, less effective alternatives to court (such as mediation), and greater government interference.

Global rankings

Globally, the top-ranked country in the 2025 WJP Rule of Law Index is Denmark, followed by Norway, Finland, Sweden, and New Zealand. The country with the lowest score is Venezuela, followed by Afghanistan, Cambodia, Haiti, and Nicaragua.
