Sierra Leone Ranks 109 out of 143 in the WJP Rule of Law Index

- 2025 WJP Rule of Law Index[®] finds the rule of law recession accelerates as authoritarian trends expand
- Decline in judicial independence and shrinking civic space signal heightened risk to democracy worldwide
- Sierra Leone's score increased, ranks 17 out of 34 regionally

WASHINGTON (October 28, 2025) – The global rule of law recession has accelerated again, according to the new [WJP Rule of Law Index[®] 2025](#). A stark 68% of countries declined in their rule of law in 2025, compared to 57% in the previous year.

However, Sierra Leone is among the minority of countries to see its rule of law score increase this year.

Sierra Leone's overall rule of law score increased 1.4% in this year's Index. It ranks 109th out of 143 countries worldwide.

Regionally, Sierra Leone ranks 17th out of 34 countries in Sub-Saharan Africa.* The region's top performer is Rwanda (ranked 39th out of 143 globally), followed by Namibia and Mauritius. The three countries with the lowest scores in the region are Cameroon, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, and Sudan (137th globally).

In the last year, 25 out of 34 countries declined in Sub-Saharan Africa. Of those 25 countries, 14 had also declined in the previous year.

Africa represents a significant bright spot, with four out of the top ten global improvers in the WJP Rule of Law Index originating from the region.

Among low income countries, Sierra Leone ranks 6th out of 16.

Sierra Leone and global trends

An expansion of authoritarian trends is the primary force behind the rule of law recession, with deep declines in factors measuring Constraints on Government Powers, Open Government, and Fundamental Rights.

The integrity of checks and balances has also been seriously weakened, but not in Sierra Leone.

A characteristic of this accelerated rule of law recession is a shrinking civic space. Freedoms crucial for public discourse and government oversight—measured under the Open Government and Fundamental Rights factors—saw widespread erosion. Sierra Leone is an exception to the over 70% of countries experiencing a shrinking of civic freedoms:

- “Freedom of opinion and expression” declined in 73% of countries, but not in Sierra Leone.
- “Freedom of assembly and association” declined in 72% of countries, but not in Sierra Leone.
- “Civic participation” declined in 71% of countries, but not in Sierra Leone.

The Index shows that judiciaries are losing ground to executive overreach, with rising political interference across justice systems. Indicators measuring whether the judiciary limits executive power and whether civil and criminal justice are free from improper government influence declined in 61%, 67%, and 62% of countries, respectively. This does not include Sierra Leone.

More broadly, civil justice weakened in 68% of countries, including Sierra Leone. This decline reflects longer delays, less effective alternatives to court (such as mediation), and greater government interference.

Global rankings

Globally, the top-ranked country in the 2025 WJP Rule of Law Index is Denmark, followed by Norway, Finland, Sweden, and New Zealand. The country with the lowest score is Venezuela, followed by Afghanistan, Cambodia, Haiti, and Nicaragua.
