

WITH THE NEW CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM, JUDGES PAY MORE ATTENTION DURING COURT HEARINGS

Inmates (%) who reported judges payed attention always or most of the time during their court hearings

This graph compares the experience of inmates who were processed under the old and new criminal justice system, combining information from the National Inmate Survey (ENPOL) and the implementation dates of the New Criminal Justice System (NCJS). Each dot represents the percentage of inmates who were arrested each month, and who reported the judge payed attention “always” or “most of the time” during their court hearings. ENPOL is the first inmate survey conducted at a national level in Mexico, and was administered during the last months of 2016 to almost 60,000 people. We will soon publish a detailed analysis.
